

Texas Hold'em is one of the most popular poker games of all time. It has been played since the early 1900's but has enjoyed a huge upswing in popularity since the late 1990's after being featured in a couple of films as well as on televised poker tournaments.

Poker players have agreed that Texas Hold'em is by far one of the simplest casino card games to learn. The game flow is very basic. Each player takes his turn in a clockwise manner and during each round they can only do three things – call, raise, or fold (the check is only done at pre-flop).

However, Texas Hold'em is only deceptively simple. While easy to learn, it is hard to master. This is perhaps why Texas Hold'em has managed to remain popular among both amateurs and pros alike. All Texas Hold'em games are never the same. Each time, there's always a tiny bit of difference, either in how the players play or what game structure is used.

Below is a collection of Texas Hold'em tips that can help you improve your game:

Texas Hold'em Tip – Starting Hands

Your starting hands usually tell you how your game would go. If you want to win, a Texas Hold'em tip would be to get very strong starting hands, preferably those that are high pairs (aces through 10). It is also a useful Texas Hold'em tip to play fast at pre-flop to increase the money in the pot and encourage weak hands to fold at that early stage of the game.

If you have low pairs for your starting hands, however, a Texas Hold'em tip would be to play cautiously. Fold when you have to, like if you don't flop a set soon.

Texas Hold'em Tip – Know when to fold and hold 'em

Knowing when to throw and keep your hands is the second most important thing to consider if you want to be good in this game. Here's a Texas Hold'em tip: If, for instance, a flop shows a 9/8/7, you want to draw the high ends of the straight, such as a J/10 and not the "ignorant" 6/5 or 10/6.

Texas Hold'em Tip – Observation

When you're not playing hands, a Texas Hold'em tip would be to remain an observer. Study your opponents carefully and pay attention to their "tells" that can give away some information about their hands. This Texas Hold'em tip should be a great help especially if you have a weak hand.

Texas Hold'em Tip – The Art of Bluffing

Bluffing is a common strategy used by all poker players. Not getting caught while doing it is what every player aims for. A Texas Hold'em tip is to GET CAUGHT bluffing. This Texas Hold'em tip gives your game some variation. Bluffing is a great way to win the pot.

The best Texas Hold'em tip is to just jump right into a game as a way to learn Texas Hold'em strategy. It is easier to learn by doing instead of reading about it. Texas Hold'em is a fun fast paced game with a unique strategy all its own.
